—The New York Herald wants to know why is it that the practice of the virtue of temperance should so often lead to intemperance in argument, to wholesale misrepresentation, to the use of unjust, violent and abusive language and to numberless other excesses, which we ordinarily ascribe to too frequent doses of whisky which has not been a year in bond?

We wive it up! If the great leading Democratic journal of the country can't answer a simple question like that, who can?

—The case of Mary E. Brown against Elbert Moore, janitor at the Court House, which has been on trial in the Probate Court for a day or so has naturally caused considerable talk as do affairs of crim. con. generally, whether or not they are taken into the halls of justice; and also regardless of the "color or previous condition" of the litigants. Miss Brown appointed Elbert to the responsible position of putative father to her first and only child, while he refused to accept the nomination, and the court believing that every child should have a father has called upon the defendant to give reasons, if he has any, why he should not accept and enter in upon the duties which he has been so peremptorily elected. The plaintiff in her own testimony gives positive evidence as to the guilt of the defendant, claiming that he is the father of her child, and considerable evidence was brought in to substantiate her testimony; while the defendant is quite as certain that he is innocent of the charges brought against him, and he so testified in an intelligent way.

That veracious chronicler of events, "The Detroit Free Press" tells of a man named Willis who has taken up his permanent residence in Florida, in order that he may spend all his time killing sharks, because once upon a time a shark bit his wife in two. Now that shows the inate injustice of man. He compasses the slaughter of scores of innocent, happy, joyous sharks because on a certain occasion a bad, "ornery," no account shark deprived him of the services of his wife. And he does this without stopping to reflect that maybe, after all, it wasn't a shark, but an alligator, that halved his better half.

—The New York Tribune says that the live and progressive people of the Southwest are disappointed with the Century Dictionary because it does not contain the word "bazoo." Eastern tender-feet may not know it, but "bazoo" is really a good standard word in the Southwest, no more to be sneered at or ignored than such words as dog and cat. When a politician is said to "blow his bazoo" everybody knows what is meant. In Sedalia, Mo., there is a lively paper called "The Bazoo," and in other ways "bazoo" enters largely into the daily life of the people. Therefore, if the Century Dictionary folks want to work up a big Southern business, they will have to find a place for "bazoo."

A recent article in the Manchester (England) Courier is a fair exponent of the rapidly increasing detestation of free trade now prevalent in England. We abstract briefly as follows:

Free trade destroys employment and lowers wages, and our working people are finding it out; they do not exactly see that handing over their work to be done by foreign workers will land them in earthly paradise; the conviction must dawn upon them that if there is no work here for them to do they must "leave the country" or find shelter in the poorhouse. The "free trade science" was mere conjecture for years after its adopting; but much is known now, after bitter disappointment. The return (to protection) is certain, directly the people fully see that they have been deluded.

—In the Forum for June is begun a series of autobigraphic articles by some of the foremost men in England and America, pointing out the chief formative influences on their education and careers. Col. Henry S. Sanford, the American member of the International Commission which organized the Congo Free State, and himself an African explorer, explains the political and commercial significance of the work that has been done in opening the dark continent. There are two political articles in this number. Henry Charles Lea, of Philadelphia, whose recent letter to the President provoked much controversy, has an essay on "Fetichism in Politics," showing the chief causes of bad municipal government. The Hon. Roger Q. Mills, discussing "New England and the New Tariff Bill," advises the New England manufacturers to favor the reduction of duties on raw material.

—A woman, says the New York Star, never gets over her nervous terror of a telegram. No matter how familiar it may be to her a sudden terror always clutches her as she takes the unopened envelope in her hand and declares that she has "felt in her bones all day that something dreadful was going to happen to her." And by and by, when she gets the courage to open the sinister missive, she looks at you with a "teary" smile and says: 'Tom and Lucy will be here to-night. How glad I am! But how foolish I was! I never will again." But she will the very next time. That is what a little woman is saying now. And this is why she is saying it. Last week she went out of town to attend a wedding. The hour for the ceremony drew nigh; the guests were all assembled, and no one so gay as she. Suddenly into the midst of the joy skulked the uniformed figure of a messenger with a dispatch. It was for the little woman who, when she caught the first glimpse of it, straightway fell to sobbing and to laughing and to begging some one to catch her, because she was going to faint, and to telling between gasps how she was perfectly certain John had been sunstruck, because he was always sensitive to heat, and that she had known all day that something horrible was going to happen to her. And then she paused long enough to ask somebody to open it for her, please, and all the guests gathered silently and sympathetically about and sadness fell upon their souls, while the parson himself opened the envelope and read in prayer-book tones: "Mrs. Su-an Brown. Where are my summer trousers? —John." But Mrs. Susan finds no excuse for John.

—When he was here we did not have the pleasure of meeting the new teacher who is to take charge of a branch of our schools the coming year, but our esteemed neighbor met him which answers every purpose, as the editor was favorably "impressed with his appearance," and he is as good a judge of character as editors generally, except when his mind is warped by political prejudice, which we may be assured was not the case in this instance. There are very few who can "size up" an utter stranger so completely and tell all about him so perfectly as has our versatile cotemporary in this interview of a few brief moments; giving us to understand, as he does, all about the Professor, not forgetting the dignity of white hairs on a "middle aged" person, and the value thereof in influencing "young people of the better class" to see in him an "efficient teacher." We hope it will not be found necessary to engage a teacher especially for the scholars who may not be classified in "the better class." The bad ones need teaching quite as well as the "better class," and if the color of the hair has anything to do with the work we would go in for a red headed teacher, if necessary.

Our neighbor says of the new teacher (with no desire we may presume of forcing a particular fashion in white hairs) "While his hair is sufficiently silvered to lend to him a certain sort of dignity, there is a kindly expression in his eye." This is satisfactory, as far as it goes, but we hope that a more minute and particular description of the Professor will show that he has more than one eye; for it is a well known fact that a leading teacher in either side High school of this city could not get on well with one eye, even were it a "single eye to business," for it may as well be stated here that an Argus eyed teacher is required at any of our temples of knowledge. The Telegraph, in short, feels assured that it can tell better regarding the professor's characteristics as a "valued friend," "safe counsellor" and "efficient teacher" after he has run the school a few years; which we pray he may do to the satisfaction of scholars, parents and the Board of Education. This accomplished and The Telegraph will also "rise up and called him blessed."

WENT DEMOCRATIC.

The Silver Bill Changes Majorities in the House.

A HOT FIGHT AGAINST REFERENCE,

Resulting in a State of Affairs That Suggests the Query: "Where Are We Now?"—All the Votes, However, Carried by the Democrats—The Speaker's Defense of His Action—Springer's Warm Denunciation—General Capital City Notes.

WASHINGTON CITY, June 20.—Yesterday was a great day in the house for the silver men. The fight over the reference of the silver bill began as soon as the journal had been read, and was kept up until adjournment at 7 p. m., the result being a Democratic victory, the Democrats being reinforced by seven free coinage Republicans. After the immediate consideration moved by Bland had been voted down Wednesday, the chair instructed the clerk to record the silver bill referred to the committee on coinage, weights, and measures. This was "pizen" to the free coinage men, as that committee is opposed to free coinage, and they girded up their loins and prepared to make it interesting for the speaker when the house again convened. The first gun was fired when the journal had been read, as is customary, the clerk omitting certain routine matters, among which was the silver bill reference. Upon Mills objecting, the speaker directed the full reading, which was done.

A Lively Scene to Begin With.

Then McKinley, who with Mills, was watching for recognition, caught the speaker's eye and moved the approval of the journal, demanding the previous question. Mills protested and Springer got excited, and shouted out to the speaker: "You can ignore the rights of representatives of the people, but the people will put you down at the polls next November, and your party with you." This was rapturously applauded by the Democrats. The speaker remained calm and the vote was taken, resulting in eleven majority again the previous question, thus refusing to approve the journal. The Republicans who refused to vote with their party were Bartine of Nevada, Dehaven of California, Kelly of Kansas, Kerr of Iowa, Lind of Minnesota, Morrow of California, and Townsend of Colorado. [Applause by the Democrats.]

Mills Moves a Correction.

When the applause had ceased the speaker recognized Mills, who offered a resolution that the order of reference made by the speaker of the silver bill to the committee on coinage, weights and measures was incorrect under the rules of the house, and was made without authority under the rules, and resolving that the journal be corrected by striking the entry from it. Cannon raised the point of order that the resolution proposed to strike out an entry which recorded a question of fact, which point Mills characterized as the most absurd and reckless position he had ever seen a man take. He declared that the house kept the journal, not the speaker. Springer claimed that the house had the right to revise the journal and said that the purpose of the reference was to prevent the house voting on the bill.

Butterworth Makes a Point.

Butterworth said that the resolution offered recited that a certain thing was done; that it was done erroneously, and that because it was done erroneously it was not done at all. [Laughter.] He contended that under the rules the speaker was authorized to make the reference. The resolution rebuked the speaker for conforming to the plain letter of the rules, and to vote for it meant to unhorse the Republicans and put the Democrats in the saddle. Anderson, though a free coinage man, supported the speaker's ruling, and in reply to a question, Conger, chairman of the coinage committee, said he had no intention of preventing silver legislation.

Discussing the Rules.

Cannon, replying to the assertions of the Democrats that the Republican leaders would not permit a vote on free coinage, said, "The majority can do anything it desires." [Derisive Democratic laughter.] The discussion proceeded at great length as to whether the speaker was right in his reference of the bill under the rules. Precedents were cited on both sides. Mills said that his point was that the bill under the rules was on the speaker's table, to be disposed of by the house, and Breckinridge of Kentucky declared that the speaker's action was not erroneous, but illegal and consequently void—in other words Mills was right, and, instead of the bill having been referred, it was still on the table.

Speaker Reed's Statement.

Then the speaker began to talk. He said he desired the members of the house to divest themselves of the idea that any unusual proceedure had taken place in connection with this bill. The reference of bills of this kind and in this way had been a daily occurrence since the adoption of the present rules. The chair desired also that the house should know that this particular transaction did not take place in a corner. In the regular course of business the journal clerk had informed the speaker that among the list of bills to be referred under the rules to appropriate committees was the silver bill with senate amendments.

Bland and Springer Consulted.

The speaker had been asked whether he had any particular direction to make in regard to it. Knowing the bill to be one of grave public importance, and anxious that he should have all possible light on the subject, the chair had consulted the Democratic members of the committee on rules [Blount and McMillan], and the gentlemen from Missouri and Illinois [Bland and Springer], not for the purpose of throwing any responsibility upon them, but in order that he might benefit by any light they might be able to give. After conversing with those gentlemen it had seemed clear to the chair that the rules of the house covered the question, and that his duty was to treat the bill as he would treat any other measure. Accordingly the clerk was not directed to make any change in regard to the reference. * * *

The Question of Reference.

Did this bill contain provisions which, under the rules, ought to be considered in committee of the whole? There was a provision in the original house bill by which certain bullion was to be purchased and certificates issued thereon. The senate amendment was an amendment for free coinage, and for this an appropriation was made. If anything was clear in parliamentary law, it was that this bill was one of those which would be properly considered in committee of the whole; and this being so, it was the obvious duty of the chair to refer it in the same manner in which hundreds and thousands of bills had been referred during the present session.

Cannon's Point Overruled.

The point of order raised by the gentleman from Illinois [Cannon] put the chair in an embarrassing position, because the proposed action of the house was a declaration that an error had been made in parliamentary law. It was proposed to erase from the journal a question of fact. While the chair might have some doubt about the point of order, he felt that it was a question which the house ought to determine. He would, therefore, overrule the point of order and submit the question to the house.

The Result of the Voting.

Then the voting began. Cannon moved to table Mills' resolution; rejected—yeas, 118; nays, 123.—Bartine, Carter, DeHaven, Ewart, Kelly, Morrow, and Townsend of Colorado, Republicans, voting with the Democrats. Mills' resolution was then agreed to—yeas, 121; nays, 118. McKinley changed his vote so as to move a reconsideration, which he did, but Mills moved to lay the motion on the table, which also carried—yeas, 121; nays, 114.

Endorsed the Speaker, After All.

Mills then asked to withdraw the preamble, which recites that the order of reference made by the speaker, referring the silver bill to the committee on coinage, weights, and measures, was incorrect under the rules of the house, and done without authority under said rules. McKinley objected, and the question recurred on the adoption of the preamble. It was lost—yeas, 112; nays, 121. [Republican applause.] Springer moved the approval of the journal as amended, pending which, on motion of McKinley, the house adjourned.

Where Are We Now, Anyhow?

The result of the struggle is in doubt. Every one is asking, Where is the silver bill? Republicans say it is still in the committee on coinage, weights and measures, while the Democrats declare it has been recalled from that committee and placed upon the speaker's table, whence it may be taken by a majority vote for consideration. The chances are that Reed will hold the bill to be still in the hands of the coinage committee and that the bitter struggle will be renewed. In that event the speaker is likely to be sustained. It was noteworthy yesterday that Payson and the more conservative silver Republicans voted steadily with the speaker, showing that the terms of the compromise on a liberal silver bill are still in force. The outlook is that the speaker and the president together will be able to defeat the senate bill and put in its place the measure coining 4,500,000 ounces per month.

AN OFF DAY IN CONGRESS.

Very Little Done in the Senate—The House Corrects the Journal.

WASHINGTON CITY, June 20.—After the favorable report of a few bills and the introduction of a few more—of no general interest—in the senate yesterday, Cameron offered a resolution as a substitute for Quay's, offered Wednesday, in the matter of the sergeant-at-arms. Cameron's resolution provides for the employment of an additional page during the present session in order to get around the discharge of the page Quay is making the fight about. Both resolutions were referred. The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation was then taken up, but laid aside and a presidential veto of the bill to change the boundaries of the Umcompahgre reservation received. The remainder of the session was devoted to eulogies on Representatives Wilbur and Nutting, of New York.

The whole day in the house was spent in a successful effort to correct the journal in regard to the reference to the coinage, weights and measures committee of the silver bill. Enough Republicans voted with the Democrats to strike the reference of the bill from the record. The Republicans so voting were Bartine, Carter, De Haven, Ewart, Kelley, Morrow, and Townsend of Colorado.

Report on the National Election Law.

WASHINGTON CITY, June 20.—The report of the house committee on the election of president and vice president on the national election bill refers to the section of the constitution which provides that the "times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof; but the congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the place of choosing senators," as full authority for the bill, and justifies the legislation on the ground that whether correct or not there is an impression abroad in the land that in many congressional districts the elections are not fair. The committee says, however, that the evidence is abundant that the above impression is correct.

Pan-American Customs Union.

WASHINGTON CITY, June 20.—The president transmitted to congress yesterday the report and recommendations of the international conference on "customs union," together with a letter from Secretary Blaine stating the advantages in trade which would accrue to the United States from such a union. The secretary suggests the idea of subsidizing lines of ships to South American ports and guardedly intimates that it would be well for congress to put into the tariff bill a provision that whenever any of the South American republics admit United States products free the United States will admit the products from those republics free into this country also.

Lyman Asks a New Hearing.

WASHINGTON CITY, June 20.—Civil Service Commissioner Lyman, who was censured by the house committee which investigated the charges against the commission, has stated to a member of the committee that he considers the findings of the committee unjust, and has requested the committee to allow him to appear before it and make a statement. He will probably be heard.

Plumbers Elect Officers.

DENVER, Colo., June 20.—The plumbers' national convention has elected the following named officers: President, Robert Griffith, of Chicago; vice president, Joseph A. McDonald, of New York; secretary, Joseph R. Allcock, of Chicago; treasurer, J. Lyons, of Brooklyn. The next annual convention will be held in Cincinnati.

Opposed Medical Examining Boards.

WAUKESHA, Wis., June 20.—The question of legislation relating to the make-up of state boards of medical examination was disposed of yesterday in the American Institute of Homeopaths in session here. A resolution recommending state boards for each school of medicine was lost, and the old resolutions against any and all examining boards indorsed.

STANLEY IS HAPPY.

The Great Explorer Lauds Salisbury's Diplomacy.

HE SOUNDS A PÆAN OF PRAISE,

And Glorifies the Premier's Wisdom in Conducting the Negotiations Regarding Africa—A Great Empire for the British—France Inclined to Kick, However—The Parnellites Play Another Trick and Give the Ministry a Close Call.

LONDON, June 20.—Henry M. Stanley, in replying to an address presented to him at Berwick yesterday, took occasion to refer to the recently consummated negotiations between Great Britain and Germany on African territorial affairs. Stanley unqualifiedly glorified the wisdom of Lord Salisbury, which, in its exercise, had resulted in the addition of 500,000 square miles of territory to the British empire. Stanley said that instead of being called upon to intone the doleful jeremiad he could cheerfully sound a pæan of praise in honor, not only of the happy outcome of Anglo-German negotiations, but of the premier who had made the result possible.

The Realization of a Great Dream.

Continuing, Stanley said that the realization of the great dream of those who had been and were engaged in the work of exploring and civilizing the African continent from the Cape of Good Hope to Cairo now became a possibility. God, he added, had given the premier wisdom to act to this end, and long might he live and flourish. He felt confident that if he could muster all of the chiefs of the region that England has acquired they would acquiesce. The date of the agreement would be a red-letter day in the African calendar. If Pemba alone were put upon the market, he said, it would bring ten times as much as Heligoland. He thought the mayor ought to call a meeting to congratulate Lord Salisbury.

Heligolanders Don't Like It.

The inhabitants of Heligoland, who are all Germans, are filled with dismay, however, at the prospect of being handed over to Germany's rule with the inforced military service and other arbitary conditions which the transfer will impose upon them, and the tide of protest against the cession of their territory has set in strongly. The emigration of its inhabitants on so large a scale as to virtually depopulate the country is already threatened as a result of parliamentiary ratification of the provisions of Lord Salisbury's settlement.

THE TRICKY HOME RULER.

He Makes the Cabinet Shake in Its Boots for a Time.

LONDON, June 20.—In the house of commons last night Smith stated in reply to a question regarding the transfer of Heligoland to Germany, that conditions had been inserted in the agreement which removed the inhabitants. A bill, he said, would be introduced to ratify the cession.

A Ruse of the Parnellites.

The house having gone into committee on the licensing bill, the chairman moved that the first clause, applying £50,000 to the purchase of licenses, stand as part of the bill. Storey, Home Ruler, did not resume his speech, which was interrupted on Tuesday, and the question was put without debate. A division was taken, and the clause was carried by the narrow majority of 4, the vote being 228 to 224. The Conservatives cheered the result, but their cheers were drowned by the triumphant shouts of the opposition at the narrow escape of the government.

The Unexpected Happened.

It is not at all the custom of Home Rulers to curtail their speeches; in fact, it is just the other way, and the government did not expect Storey to forego the pleasure so dear to the opposition of hearing themselves talk; and Smith voiced the feelings of the ministry when he said that Storey had not finished his speech when the debate was last adjourned, and it was thought he would continue it; therefore the goverament had not been prepared for an immediate division.

Ingenuous Mr. Storey.

Storey thought Smith was never satisfied. Long speeches he regarded as obstructions, and no speeches was taking the government by surprise. The opposition made the most of their advantage, and Gladstone advised the withdrawal of the bill. So did T. P. O'Connor, with well dissembled solicitude for the feelings of the Conservatives, but Smith said the business would go right on, and the temporary character of the Home Rule move was plainly indicated in later divisions, under closure, and reporting progress on the bill, when the government obtained majorities respectively of 53 and 43.

France Sticks a Finger in the Pie.

PARIS, June 20.—M. Deloncle gave notice in the chamber of deputies yesterday of an interpellation in regard to the British protectorate of Zanzibar, which, he said, he considered a violation of the Anglo-French declaration signed by M. Thouvenel and Lord Cowley in 1862, pledging mutual non-interference in Zanzibar and the independence of the sultan, to which agreement Germany adhered in 1806.

Russia Adopting Protection.

LONDON, June 20.—A dispatch from Moscow is published by The Standard, in which the customs officials are represented to have received sealed instructions ordering them to increase the duties on imports into Russia. THE MEN NOT ALL DEAD.

Entombed Miners at Dunbar Heard From—A Wife's Steadfast Hope.

DUNBAR, Pa., June 20.—General Manager Hazzard was seen late last evening. "You may say," he said, "that there are men down in the mine alive. They have been heard from. We do not expect to reach them till 2 or 3 o'clock to-morrow morning. They will be taken care of. The Catholic priests are down in the mine at the present time. They will stay there till the opening is made. I have ordered a corps of physicians to be at hand ready for anything. We don't want to let the people know outside, because the excitement would be too great. We will reach the men."

Waiting to Welcome Her Husband.

Of the hundreds who have gone through all phases of hope to despair there is one whose steadfast faith has been more than encouraging, even when the affair looked the blackest. David Davis, an old Welsh miner, was at one time intombed nine days in a mine in Cornwall, and his wife never gave up. She remembers that day, and should David Davis ever emerge from the mines here he will find a woman calmly awaiting at the door to welcome him. She patiently repeats to all visitors that Davy will come, and no amount of reasoning or argument will make her believe that her husband is not alive and hoping for his final return to her as placidly as she awaits his coming.

One of Them Shot While Engaged in a Reprehensible Enterprise.

SHAWNEETOWN, I. T., June 20.—Two Indian boys at the government school for Indian children were suspected by Professor Harvey of paying clandestine visits at night to the apartments of two Indian girls. The professor a few nights ago armed himself with a double-barreled gun, and watched for the boys. They soon made their appearance, and started to climb into the girls' room, by means of a rope ladder. The professor called on them to stop, but they only climbed the faster. The professor then shot at them, inflicting a very serious wound on one of them. The Shawnee Indians are very much excited over the matter.

Scaly Skin Diseases

Psoriasis 5 years, covering face, head and entire body with white scabs. Skin red, itchy and bleeding. Hair all gone. Spent hundreds of dollars. Pronounced incurable. Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

Cured by Cuticura

My disease (psoriasis) first broke out on my left cheek spreading across my nose, and almost covering my face. It ran into my eyes, and the physician was afraid I would loose my eyesight altogether. It spread all over my head, and my hair all fell out, until I was entirely bald-headed; it then broke out on my arms and shoulders, until my arms were just one sore. It covered my entire body, my face, head, and shoulders being the worst. The white scabs fell constantly from my head, shoulders, and arms; the skin would thicken and be red and very itchy, and would crack and bleed if scratched. After spending many hundreds of dollars, I was pronounced incurable. I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and after using two bottles CUTICURA RESOLVENT I could see a change; and after I had taken four bottles, I was almost cured; and when I had used six bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT and one box of CUTICURA, and one cake of CUTICURA SOAP, I was cured of the dreadful disease from which I had suffered for five years. I thought the disease would leave a very deep scar, but the CUTICURA REMEDIES cured it without any scars. I cannot express with a pen what I suffered before using the CUTICURA REMEDIES. They saved my life, and I feel it my duty to recommend them. My hair is restored as good as ever, and so is my eyesight. I know of others who have received great benefit from their use.

A WILLING WIDOW.

Novel Proposition Made to a Minneapolis Man.

TWO BIRDS WITH ONE MISSILE,

Are What a Florida Woman Proposes to Bring Down—Her Situation Being a Critical One, She Waives Coventionality and Proposes Marriage, Thereby Saving Property She Has Worked for and Supplying Herself with a Helpmeet.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 20.—A young man in St. Paul named Frank Waltenberger recently discovered that he was the owner of property valued at $25,000 in Florida. A few days ago he received the following letter from Chipley, Washington county, Fla.:

"DEAR SIR: In writing you this letter I perhaps am violating the laws of conventionality; but, as we have never met, in fact, you have never heard of me until now, there can be nothing of sentiment in the proposition I am about to make to you. To explain, first of all, how I know your address and name. Last week The Washington County Times published a story credited to a St. Paul paper, in which it was set forth that you were the legal owner, by the possession of an old deed, of section 36, township 3, range 14, in this county.

An Inventory of Interest.

"I laughed at the story at first, for I own half of that section myself, though as it now appears, my title is imperfect. The other day I received a notice from a firm of lawyers in Jacksonville of the true state of affairs, and what I now have to say to you is after due deliberation on the situation. I have improved this property in such a manner that it is very valuable. I own a timber mill which employs twelve hands and yields me a fair income, besides which I have property in Pensacola, giving me an income of $1,000 a year. I have also three farms, railroad land along the line of the Louisville and Nashvill railroad, yielding me a fair annual profit.

A Jewel of a Woman.

"The newspaper account I read of your appearance stated that you were good looking, poor, and hard working. I am a widow, 28 years old, am called good looking by my friends, and by those who dislike me I am said to be too stout. I have two children, Mamie, 5 years old, and Elsie, 3. Their father died some years ago, and was unable to attend to business during the last few years of his life, being an invalid from rheumatic trouble, and I carried on the business myself then as I do now. Now, Mr. Waltenberger, you have the title to this property, which I have labored very hard to render productive. I am attached to the place, and should dislike to abandon prospects which seem fairly brilliant.

The Chance of Your Life, Frank.

"Here, then, is my offer: I have a growing business, a fair income and two children. You have a deed to some property of which you know but little except that it is said to be of value. Will you marry me, share equally with me in everything, and as my husband relieve me of the burden of a business which has grown to greater proportions than I can successfully operate alone. You may have an attachment; if so, the subject is to be dropped at once, and we must negotiate on other lines. If, on the other hand, you are heart whole, and like my appearance from the photo I send you, let me have yours in return, together with your views on the subject of this proposal.

Will Not Stick at Trifles.

"All other things being satisfactory, I can arrange to come to St. Paul for the purpose of becoming better known to you, or I will make any arrangement you wish, should you prefer to visit Chipley or Pensacola with the same object. Hoping that you may regard this somewhat unusual proposition in its proper light, I am, sir, yours very obediently,

ELLEN M. WALDO."

Frank Will Investigate.

Mr. Waltenberger, who is unmarried, declines to say what he will do in the matter, but expresses great admiration for a woman with such a good head for business. The Jacksonville firm of lawyers who are looking out for his interests inform him that it may cost him several thousand dollars to secure his title. He is about to make a trip to Florida to take a look at the property and the widow.

Before adjourning they adopted a resolution denouncing Senator Sherman for voting with others in favor of the sale of intoxicating liquors at the World's fair in Chicago.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 20.—Mrs. Esther Heaton has been arrested at the instance of a census enumerator for refusing to answer questions. She then took another half hour to dress before going to the court-room. When she reached the commissioner she said she would answer the question, and did. She was put under $100 bond.

Did Some Poor Shooting.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 20.—Last evening several pistol shots were fired in front of the Opera house, on Main street, and then two men were seen grappling. They were Dr. W. W. Ray, of Congaree, this county, and Trial Justice F. H. Weston, recently appointed. The men are cousins, and both are young. Weston was shot in the left side and left thigh, and Ray got a scalp wound. The firing was at close range, the combatants being almost within arm's length.

It does seem singular that so many people will let their skin become yellow, dark and greasy, (finally resulting in blotches and skin eruptions, as well as a general drying up of the blood, causing wrinkles and premature old age) when this can be remedied with so little expense. Two bottles of Beggs' Blood Purifier and Blood Maker will renew and purify the blood throughout the whole system, leaving the skin clear and free from all eruptions.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED ANCIENT EDITION.

A so-called "Webster's Unabridged Dictionary" is being offered to the public at a very low price. The body of the book, from A to Z, is a cheap reprint, page for page, of the edition of 1847, which was in its day, a valuable book, but in the progress of language for over FORTY YEARS, has been completely superseded. It is now reproduced, broken type, errors and all, by photo-lithograph process, is printed on cheap paper and flimsily bound. A brief comparison, page by page, between the reprint and the latest and enlarged edition, will show the great superiority of the latter. These reprints are as out of date as a last year's almanac. No honorable dealer will allow the buyer of such to suppose that he is getting the Webster which to-day is accepted as the Standard and THE BEST,—every copy of which bears our imprint as given below.

If persons who have been induced to purchase the "Ancient Edition" by any misrepresentations will advise us of the facts, we will undertake to see that the seller is punished as he deserves.

A Coffin for a Couch.

The girl has at once courted and defied superstition, for while her toilet appointments, paper knives, etc., are all in horseshoe shape or have for handles the left hind foot of rabbits, she has a weird, moon shaped clock from which the ill omened cuckoo announces the hours. The most horrible corner of the room she rarely shows, for it represents an unfulfilled purpose.

When she furnished the room, she decided to have a coffin in it, a la Bernhardt. She went to an undertaker, was measured, selected the style of casket and then told the undertaker to have it sent to her boxed so that no one would know its contents. The poor man was as scared as Tam o' Shanter when he saw the witches at Alloway kirk. His fair patroness belonged to a large family, and he knew he would lose all chance of future patronage if the father got wind of it, so he went to him and told him of his daughter's strange freak. There was a breeze in the house that night when the father gave his daughter the choice of his money or her coffin.

That is the reason one corner of her room has no tenant save a skeleton and a black draped dais which was to have held the coffin. The girl who designed this horror breeding room has been a belle for two seasons, and people seeing her childlike face would take her for an artless debutante.—Miss Grundy's Washington Letter.

The table used by President Harrison as a writing desk is made of the timbers of the British ship Resolute, which an American vessel rescued in the Arctic ocean. When the ship was being repaired the queen caused a table to be made of some of the timbers and presented to the then president of the United States.

The cost of maintaining one of the proposed battle ships while cruising is about $25,000 per month.

The Waiter Stood Aghast.

A good story, in which two distinguished Louisianians and a no less distinguished Georgian figured somewhat conspicuously in a restaurant in Washington, D. C., was related to a newspaper man. The Louisianians were Hon. Thomas J. Semmes and Mr. James Legendre, of this city, and the Georgian was Hon. Ben Hill, son of the late senator, and himself a prominent Georgia politician. The party were en route to New York city to attend the centennial of the supreme court of the United States.

On the arrival of the train at Washington, D. C., the usual time for breakfast was announced, and Messrs. Semmes and party, taking advantage of the opportunity thus offered, hastened to the nearest restaurant. Each ordered as his taste and inclination prompted, and settled his own account. Messrs. Semmes and Hill attacked the bill of fare to the extent of $1, and Mr. Legendre contented himself with a seventy-five cent meal.

Breakfast ended, the three gentlemen each handed the waiter a silver dollar—the exact amount of money due by Messrs. Semmes and Hill. Twenty-five cents were due Legendre, however, and this amount the waiter returned to him on his tray. Mr. Legendre had enjoyed his breakfast, and being in good humor, replaced the quarter on the tray to "tip" the waiter.

The waiter, placing the money in a glass on his tray, passed it to Mr. Semmes as a gentle reminder of what was expected of him. Mr. Semmes was, however, busily conversing with his friend, Mr. Hill, at the time, and in an absent minded sort of way quietly appropriated the tip money under the impression, no doubt, that it was his change. The waiter was dumfounded, and Mr. Legendre, somewhat embarrassed, beckoned to him and dropped an additional quarter on the tray to soothe his feelings. This the waiter passed to Mr. Hill with the hope that he, at least, had "caught on," and that Mr. Semmes might finally be brought to a knowledge of his mistake. But he again made a serious error. Mr. Hill dealt with the tip money just as Mr. Semmes had done in the first instance and the conversation proceeded in the ordinary way.

Mr. Legendre was already out fifty cents in the scheme, and was consequently not further inclined in that direction, and before the waiter could recover sufficiently to explain the mistake the three strangers left the restaurant and were on their way to New York.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Trimming Off Large Ears.

Modern surgery has not hesitated to cut a new nose out of the cheek, to loop up a drooping eyelid, or engraft the skin of one person upon another, but it has not until now given a man's ears a setback. To Dr. William W. Keen, of Jefferson college, came a brother physician to repair a job that had been badly done by nature's 'prentice hand, so to speak. The young man, for he was only 19, was all ears; that is to say, his ears were not only abnormally large, but they flapped in a painfully absurd manner.

The surgeon proceeded to lay bare the cartilage by removing the skin from the posterior surface of the auricle, and then excised a long, narrow piece of the cartilage—V shaped in cross sections, as if he had run a miniature plow over the ridge on the back of the ear. Great care was taken not to cut clear through and thus cause a scar on the anterior surface. The edges of the cartilage were then drawn together by catgut stitches, in addition to those in the skin. This was done while the young man was etherized. He went to sleep with long ears, and he awoke with short ears—very sore ones, and so intricately fastened into position that for some nights he had to sleep flat on his back. But when the wound had healed and the plasters were removed he found himself possessed of symmetrical and fair sized ears.—Philadelphia Letter.

Wanted to Price Tickets.

There was a line ten feet long at the ticket window in the Hudson River railroad waiting room and the policeman on duty was busy reminding the slower travelers to be brisk with their change, when a tall, thin, elderly woman, with spectacles and with a complexion like a halibut, peered in at the ticket clerk and said:

"What do you ask for a ticket to Poughkeepsie?"

"One dollar forty seven."

"Is that the lowest price?"

"Only one rate."

"Eliza Smith went up last month and only paid one dollar and thirty cents."

"There's been no change, madam. Do you want a ticket?"

"Would I save anything if I went to Peekskill, got off and bought another ticket there?"

"Costs more. Hurry, madam, there are others waiting."

"Well, I only wanted to price tickets. I never knowed Eliza Smith to tell the truth before and I just wanted to be sure that she hadn't broke no record."—New York Tribune.

A New Way of Booming.

Many unique devices have been resorted to for booming embryo towns, but that employed by the real estate pushers of a fledgling on Puget sound takes the lead. Two professional wrestlers were matched and the result of the contest telegraphed throughout the coast. It was not stated whether the contest was held under a big fir tree or on the tide flats.—Exchange.

Unexpectedly Small.

Two little boys of my acquaintance, writes a correspondent of The Companion, had been invited out to tea at the house of a third little boy, and their mother had told them to take but one cooky each if there were cookies for tea.

Sure enough a plate of fancy cakes was passed at the table.

Freddy, the older boy, looked at the diminutive "baby cakes" a moment and then took two, saying as he did so to his little brother of four years:

"You may take two, Willie; I'm sure mamma had no idea they would be so very small."—Youth's Companion.

Some Peculiar Crabs.

In Bermuda the soldier crab carries heavy shells up the hills to puzzle future geologists. Another species climbs the mangrove trees. A shore crab in the Cape Verde islands may "be seen running along like a piece of paper blown by a strong wind." In Ascension islands there are crabs which "climb to the top of Green mountain, and the larger ones steal the young rabbits from their holes and devour them." The famous robber crab of the Philippines, that cracks and eats cocoanuts, is itself routed out of its hole and feasted on by the wild swine.—Edinburgh Review.

Not a Bad Mistake.

The editor wrote it: "While this cold weather lasts be mindful of others poorer than yourself. Turn not away in silence from the appeal for charity. Give the applicant something, if only some kindly word." The intelligent compositor made the last clause "if only some kindling wood," and he builded better than he knew.—New York Observer.

$1000.

My offer of $100 has not been taken, nor would $1000. The fact is, there is no pump made that can compete with the COMBINED AIR and CISTERN PUMP, for purifying water when used in combination with my well, for cisterns, it will draw water from the well or cistern, thus saving an extra pump. The well is improved, the water passes down below the bottom of the cistern through five feet of gravel and sand before entering the well, then upwards in the well through gravel, sand and charcoal, properly prepared and packed. This will keep the water cold, remove all live animal matter, and the well will not require to be repacked. How different from this is an ordinary well where the earth is the filter: there may be some dead reptile at the bottom of the well, or the water may contain poison. If water passing through the earth will become hard, adulterated with lime, why will it not hold filth poisonous mater in solusion. The well will be furnished at a reasonable price. Price of cistern pump at shop, $4 00. There should be an air pump in every cistern where there is a chain or suction pump, it will keep the water good. Price of air pump $1 00.

I now make a spécialty of putting in cisterns in connection with my pumps and wells. All work will be fully warranted. Get my prices before giving your orders. My Air and Cistern Pumps do what no other pump can do, take the foul oder out of cistern water in five minutes, and will do the work of two pumps, draw the water out of the well or cistern. When the pumps are put up, arrangements are made to put the well in afterwards. I know you will have it when once you know its merits. If you still insist on having the chain pump I can furnish them to you for $1.50 to $2.00, as I can trade for them. Now is the time to use the Air Pump before your cistern water gets foul. Price $1 00.
